Challenges of a Pole Owner: The Electric Co-Op Perspective

Michael Surran started his journey in the Electric Utility Field over 35 years ago. Being a seasoned journeyman lineman and working in the trenches has given him practical experience and an insight few possess. He tackles any “problem” project presented to him. He turns it around, points it in the right direction, resulting with positive outcomes.

Michael is currently tasked with the ever growing challenge many utilities are now facing, of managing Joint Use and Special Projects for the largest REA in Colorado. As this demand grows, he has been able to collaborate successfully for both consumer and company needs.

Michael, originally from the Chicago area, has made Colorado his permanent home with his family. He enjoys travelling internationally and the opportunity to expand in his quest to speak German more fluently. He also supports the agricultural community by being a keeper of bees.
